ICBC Seeks Top Brass

By LINDA HUGHES Times Staff

The Insurance Corporation of B.C. has been advertising for United States and in Britain.

A government spokesman onfirmed today that ICBC has been seeking new top management people and has been advertising outside the country for those jobs.

The corporation originally began looking for people in B.C. and across Canada only but could not find the kind of "very senior insurance peo-ple" they needed to fill out the ranks of ICBC's manage-by its policy of preference for B.C. citizens in employment, he said, but because Canada has few insurance company head offices there are few Canadians with the kind of experience ICBC wants.

During that first round of advertising, he said, ICBC was not identified as the firm seeking employees and the management company in charge of advertising found few qualified people interested in the job.

But once the ads went fied people have applied, more may be added to the corporation's management.

Their salaries would likely be in the $30,000-$40,000 range.

He said ICBC had a comparatively small executive team during the two start-up years. during the two start-up years some machine," one officer of operation and now with nearly 2,000 employees there is a need for expansion.

Some Unsolicited Advice

It is always galling when the guy next door tries to tell you how to run your own house. Canadians are used to unsolicited advice from our American neighbors. But when the shoe is on the other foot — as when former Prime Minister Lester Pearson timidly suggested the U.S. might stop bombing North Vietnam - the Johnson administration reacted angrily. Now U.S. Defence Secretary James Schlesinger says Canada must make a greater contribution to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization or the balance of power might tip towards the Soviets.

Few Canadians would argue that our national defence policy is adequate. The armed forces total strength has been cut to slightly less than 80,000 persons. Most equipment in land, sea and air elements is obsolete or obsolescent. Rather than replace the equipment with dispatch, the government has dithered. A postponement until December on the choice of a new maritime patrol aircraft will cost Canadian taxpayers millions of dollars. It is also questionable whether our heavy reliance on American equipment is conditioned by quality or the balance of payments. Those scores of F-5 "Freedom Fighters" sitting in mothballs or sold to South American dictatorships suggest the latter course.

If the mechanisms are bad, the policies are worse. Stated government policy gives protection of national sovereignty the number one defence priority. Yet north of the Northwest Passage, where all that oil and gas is supposed to be, the only full-time Canadian armed forces detachment is at Alert, on the northern tip of Ellesmere Island. Other than reduced trans-Arctic flights and a few scattered pockets of armed forces personnel, that is Canada's northern presence. Maritime Command possesses no icebreakers capable of penetrating even loose ice north of 60 degrees latitude. Still, the government maintains the fiction that Canada can fulfill all its roles in NATO, NORAD, peacekeeping and sovereignty. It's a bad joke, given the numbers, equipment and budget of the armed forces.

Despite the current morass Canada should not follow Schlesinger's demands and slavishly pour our limited resources into defending Europe. NATO should remain a cornerstone of our defence policy if only to ensure our voice in European counsels, especially those relating to trade. But our European defence presence has always been more psychological than military. Our current contribution of 5,000 troops and a few squadrons of fighter-bombers ensure us a diplomatic entree within our national means. Since Canada's contribution militarily would never turn the tide of a battle, the U.S. anxiety over our share seems to be as much a product of selling continued U.S. forces in Europe to the American congress as the threat of growing Soviet military might. Canada's reduced European military contingent is looked on by some U.S. legislators as all the more reason to reduce U.S. European military expenses. It is also interesting that the U.S. defence secretary was diffident about NORAD — a treaty which Canada renews with knee-jerk regularity - because he does not believe North America faces any serious or immediate threat.

Putting aside Schlesinger's demands and their political overtones, what should Canadian defence policy be? The inescapable conclusion is that instead of shovelling money into European defence we should follow the dictum of stated policy and defend ourselves. Most of the Canadian Armed Forces equipment - including that of NATO - should be modernized. Where possible, we should be designing Canadian equipment for Canadian defence. On expensive items such as the maritime patrol aircraft we could lease aircraft like the Lockheed Orion for a fraction of the cost of buying them. As for Schlesinger's unsolicited advice, thanks, but no

Stringband Rosin

How pleasant to hear from kin that Stringband is being written about clear on the other side of the country, even if our spelling has altered with the miles. It is pleasing too to find that you have considered our song Dief Will Be the Chief Again with such thorough concern. However, to give credit where it is due, we cannot accept the authorship you attribute to us for songs about maple leaves, totem poles, beavers or Eddie Shack. We do have evangelical cowboys, jailed fiddlers, promiscuous cats, dispos sessed farmers and a male chauvinist jig, but alas, none for Eddie Shack, etc.

On the other hand, to take credit where it is due, Dief Will Be the Chief Again was not inspired, as you suggested, by an American hit about Harry Truman. It was actually written earlier, but its release was delayed by the unwillingness of record companies to distribute Canadian records, particularly those with distinctly Canadian appeal. Thereby hangs a tale. And perhaps another editorial. Finally, while I think you have caught the song's persona dead to rights on his 'bungled' logic, he might well argue with your editorial writer's interpretation of Canadian history. In 1957 Louis St. Laurent was indeed prime minister, as you point out, but that was only for a few months. After that he and the Liberals, in power for over 20 years, were ousted by John Diefenbaker. Do you think that could be the cause of my character's rejoicing? - Bob Bossin, String-elected, and heaven only knows how many other goodies given to the faithful? We will only have the chance to find out when the new government can examine the books

Private enterprise has always paid for its own world travel and other goodies, but I strongly suspect the NDP elected have behaved like kids let loose in a candy store. Never having honestly made good incomes, they gave in to the temptation to avail themselves of the overflowing purse left by the last Social Credit government. I am not suggesting anything illegal, just the goodies that the government could hand out. Like a trip to London to see how oil can be produced or to Sweden to see how houses can be built, etc., etc., etc.

I, for one, will be most happy to see the new Social Credit party under a capable businessman like Bill Bennett in charge of all our tax money and wealth. - M. P. Paine, 3620 Quadra Street.

Inciting Hatred

Despite Premier Dave Barrett's angry tirade against banking profits, the profitability of trade and industry can never be the source of inflation. A profitable company largely generates its own capital for expansion and modernization. Less need to borrow means less pressure on interest rates. Moreover, every trade unionist knows that a profitable company is one best able to pay high wages and provide good working conditions.

So far this year the 10 Canadian charered banks have made $59 million more

I wish to protest the inclusion in your 'letters" of September 13 that of Bill Bennett. While I respect the right of an editor to indulge in partisan politics in print I find you have gone too far in this regard. Bennett in his letter points out weaknesses in the present government's programs which can be taken as the le gitimate complaints of a B.C. citizen and as such I do not object to their being expressed, but he then undertakes the task of outlining his own policy should his party take office. This is at best political advertising and smacks of elec-

If you and your paper wish to give free space to political advertisements you are free to do so, however, to turn the very few inches your paper puts aside for public opinion to this task is a disservice to your readers. Bennett's letter occupies almost two-thirds of that space. Perhaps if he had sent along a picture you would have thought it reasonable to include it! The content of Bennett's letter is misleading. He suggests that by placing more money in the hands of municipalities his plan "... would offer every British Columbian family the opportunity to own a piece of land and a home which they can afford to maintain." It may be true that a reduced land tax would make it easier for those who can afford a home to maintain it. It would do nothing to help those who cannot afford a home to maintain one as Bennett implies. Bennett seems to have started his campaign rather early and with the usual political wind, let's not let it blow your readers and letter-writers off the page again. - John Devlin, Victoria,

From the Times of September 18, 1915 There was an utter absence of formality or ceremoniousness in the departure last night of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught after his brief visit to Victoria. His Royal Highness, who dined at Government House as the guest of Lt.-Gov. and Mrs. Barnard, motored from there direct to the Vancouver boat accompanied only by members of his staff. The duke was here as part of a visit of inspection to naval and military units stationed in this district.

Kill CIA Frankenstein Monster

NEW YORK - The disclosure that mand and control within the CIA" - a thorized to kill various foreign leaders, the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency laxity all the more frightening because if ded a supply of deadly poisons and darts guns in direct contravention of Richard Nixon's order to destroy such poisons in 1969 is only one more bit of evidence that this agency is a Franken stein's monster that must itself be de-

There are several ways to explain the stockpiling of shellfish toxin and cobra venom against express presidential orders. First, the poisons might secrety have been ordered preserved by Nixon himself. Or the top command of the CIA might have made the decision to retain them, for reasons of its own. Finally, lower-level authorities within the agency might have disobeved their own immedisuperiors and saved the poisons against some real or imagined needs they foresaw.

Subterfuge and Lies

It does not mean much that the CIA itself apparently disclosed the retention of the poisons to the investigating committee headed by Senator Frank Church of Idaho. It could be, of course, that the present CLA command has only recently discovered the cached poisons, as is being contended. But given this agency's record of subterfuge, concealment and distortion of the record, it is just as easy to suppose that the disclosure was made only because of recent inquiries into CIA activities, and the possibility that the truth would have been uncovered any-

However the matter is viewed, few incidents could more dramatically disclose the dangers of this many-chambered house of deceit, fear, power and secrecy. If Nixon ordered the poisons secretly preserved against his own stated policy of renouncing bacteriological warfare. then he should not have had a secret agency able and willing to do his bidding. If the agency took it upon itself to ontravene Nixon's declared policy, it could only have done so because of the power and autonomy derived from its ability to operate in secrecy. If lower-level officials disobeyed their own superiors as well as Nixon and stockpiled the poisons against national policy, then as Church has said there was an incredible "looseness of com-

That is why the illicit stockpiling of the poisons - whatever use might have been intended for them, by whoever was responsible - is one of the more frightening disclosures about this shadowy

It is reminiscent of the report that when James Schlesinger, while briefly the CIA director, ordered a halt to all questionable counterintelligence activities in 1973, agency security officials increased the number of his bodyguards.

If they feared for his safety within the then what might not uncontrolled agents be capable of outside the CIA? The secretly stockpiled poison suggests chilling possibilities.

Illicit domestic spying, secret and loosely controlled experiments with drugs, connections to the underworld, plots that may or may not have been auare the inevitable consequences of great power, essentially unchecked, cloaked in the mystique of national security, and authorized to operate in secrecy. No amount of congressional oversight could have prevented the stockpiling of those poisons, or their possible illicit use; and whatever may yet be disclosed about the assassination plots, and who may have authorized them, it is clear that they could have been and perhaps were undertaken on the agency's own initiative.

Such secret power is intolerable in an open, democratic society. Just as CIA covert techniques came to be employed in domestic politics by the White House plumbers under Howard Hunt, so might even more dangerous CIA tactics and attitudes, spawned in the dark atmosphere of an anything-goes operation waging secret wars in the name of national security, further contaminate the national life. Perhaps they already have, in ways that only a year or so ago would have been regarded as figments of conspiratorial

CIA Not Necessary

Enough is already known of the Church committee's findings - it is plausible to suppose that there is more to be disclosed - to support a recommendation that the CIA as now constituted be abolished.

Then, its presumably able and useful ections devoted to the straight collection and analysis of intelligence could be reorganized into a successor agency unburdened and unsullied with covert operations and vast secret powers to overturn governments, harass other nations, subvert or kill their leaders, and thwart their legitimate aspirations. Such powers not only have no place in a decent society, but if permitted will almost inevitably be turned against the society that grants them. To the extent that covert operations of some kind may be legitimate and necessary, surely an overpowering secret serve Mr. Barrett's frantic warnings agency is not required to carry them out. Depending on the nature of the case, some small, efficient unit within the U.S. state department or the military would the "spoils of office" or such ripoffs as be sufficient, and infinitely easier to con-

Mind Boggling

Besides fueling speculation about po sible personal political motives, Beryl Plumptre's lashout at our governments - with emphasis on the feds - for being mainly responsible for our economic ills has another facet. It points to an early blunder of Trudeau and Co. in giving a low priority to constitutional reform. The astronomical increase in the proportion of our productivity absorbed by all levels of government could have been greatly ameliorated had it been spelled out who was responsible for what in controls and services, and which level could occupy each taxation field. With one or two exceptions such as finance and public works, no department of government should exist on more than one level. The idea that more than one of the three levels (four in B.C.!) should each maintain a bureaucracy on social assistance, or labor, or communications for instance, is an Alice-in-Wonderland concept that boggles the mind. We need omehow to decide which level can best handle each area of government, which level should have exclusive right to each type of taxation, and have it laid down categorically - thus ending the interminable bickering between them.

Perhaps the fact that this has not come to pass, or even been advocated by any political group, points to a major fault of democracy in today's society. The present system - or lack of it must suit our leaders and aspirants, evidently because it allows them to fend off responsibility and criticism for their own derelictions by blaming those above, or - W. F. Reeves, Cowichan Sta-

Capable Businessman

In the late unpleasantness in Europe, Hitler always accused his victims of just the crime he was perpetrating, or about to, on them. It is most revealing to obabout Social Credit supporters wanting the "spoils of office." What does an innocent man and his followers know about world travel junkets, huge salary increases given by themselves to the NDP same period the federal and provincial governments have expended about $500 more for every person in Canada, while in a period of relative stagnation the federal government has increased the money supply by 17 per cent. Judge then, where the cause of inflation lies. Today, we are worried about shortages of every description, already here, or to come. Profits are not the cause of this. When federal taxation policies made the building and renting of apartments highly profitable, there was no lack of rental space available. When the federal government closed the loopholes on this profitability, building of rental accommodation almost ceased, and today, we have a distressing shortage of rental accommodation and high rents

Finally, when the interests of the society that is Canada are identical, it is a sad error to incite hatred between the component members of that society. which is even today, the finest example in the world of people living in harmony. - J. P. Thornton, 943 Wilmer Street.

Union Strife Poses a Dilemma for Barrett

By ED FINN

The recent spate of crip-pling strikes in British Columbia is shaping, for good or ill, the future of the province's New Democratic Party gov-thought on the eventual outprovince. One is that the Barrett government will continue with its avowed policy of "letting free collective bargaining take its course," thereby losing so much public support that it will be turfed out of office in the next election.

The other theory is that Barrett will save his govern-ment's hide by cracking down on organized labor, and per-haps even by calling a snap election for a mandate to get tougher with the unions.

The latter is an improbable scenario for a government al-legedly composed of "friends of labor." But it's not impos-parently left most Americans rather pleased. Many seem downright delighted, and salesmen trying to find buyers for Municipal Assistance Corporation bonds report a positive emotional hostility, suggesting a desire to see the place plowed with salt like conquered Carth-

The reason for this antipathy is easily explained and easily removed. It is the rich and the poor. The rich of New York are mostly people who left Main Street for Gomorrah-by-the-Bronx and ended up on top of the world.

Few people who have stayed home rew people who have stayed home and watched an old school pal go on to tailored suits, hip flasks and long-stemmed beauties on distant boulevards are spiritually elevated by the spectacle of the hero's success. Many experience twinges of pleasure upon hearing that he is mired in a pen.

New York is filled with these human successes we all went to school with before they began lunching on expense accounts and dictating memoranda in limousines. Only a person with a heart of mush could weep upon hearing that their mileau has gone sour.

To compound the problem, New York is also filled with the poor, the in-competent and the wretched. It is the national convention centre for life's losers, and while everybody may not love a winner, this is a country where most people believe nobody can really lose unless he tries to. The high concentration of these misfits in New York is accountable partly to the intelligence spread across the land that New York treats them less abominably than most impression of New York, It is perceived as a city of arrogant successes

If it is a pleasure to despise such an urban perversion of the American code, it is also a cruel injustice to the great-majority of New York's population who will never lunch at Lutece or cash a welfare cheque.

A solution becomes obvious. If the successes and the failures were both removed, Americans would again see New York as a place much like Kansas City or Des Moines, full of earnest white-collar toilers and purposeful yeomany. New York's problems would then be seen' to' be the same problems every place else faces, and a creative spirit of brotherhood untainted by ugly programs and coronic court would yeomatical and coronic court would yeomatical and coronic court would yeomatical and coronic court would yeomatical.

Disposing of the troublesome ele-ment in New York would, moreover, vastly increase the city's per capita wealth and possibly its present financial problem. If all the successes and all the failures were moved elsewhere, the population decline would be about one and a half million persons, the great majority of whom would be people who merely drain the city's wealth.

Relocating a million poor people is relatively easy. One month very soon, they could be mailed, instead of welfare cheques, bus tickets to Chicago, or perhaps to Washington. It is a difficult choice. Chicagoans boast that Chicago knows how to cope with poor people but, on the other hand, President Ford's ment could teach New York a thing or two about handling money argues in favor of letting the federal city give. these wretched losers the benefit of Washington's superior fiscal know-how.

Alternately, they might be shipped to a suburb. The future of America lies in the suburbs, everyone says. That's where the old virtues abide and people still understand about work, dedication Surely, a million losers from New York would profit from the salubrious ethical atmosphere of, say, Armonk, N.Y. or Chevy Chase, Md., which would doubtless be proud to give New Yorkers a lesson in how to deal with such people.

Disposing of the rich will not be so easy. No other city will wish to take them all, lest the new host city-incur the same kind of enmity these successes brought upon New York.
They must be spread around. Television people might be assigned to Buffalo and the theatre crowd to East St. Louis; which could use brighter lights.

The gangster community could be relocated in Roanoke, Va., which needs excitement. The beautiful-people set, which flies to the Alps, could go to Salt Lake City, which has a good airport, and the bankers and market kings could be moved to Baltimore, where East Pratt Street would doubtless soon make the world forget Wall Street had ever 100

Afterwards, no American would dislike New York again, and anyone from anywhere visting New York would feel so perfectly at home standing on a street corner on a Saturday, night eating a piece of cheese that nobody probably

Cats' Lineup Taking Shape For Ginnell

By ERNIE FEDORUK Times Staff

.Coach Pat Ginnell is starting to form "a pretty good idea" of the players who may form the nucleus of the 1975-76 Victoria Cougars' entry in the Western Canada Major Junior Hockey League. Major Junior Hockey League.

Nine, holdovers from last season have to figure prominently, and the line of Kim.

DOWN FILLED JACKETS

A down jacket is your best buy for winter. Take it from the bird who wears one.

When you can't fly south for the winter, do what the ducks do. Slip into a coat of warm, cozy down. As any duck could tell you, the waterfowl's natural down is the ultimate insulation. Unlike synthetic insulators that form bulky mats, pure down feathers cling together gently, forming the "dead" air space that is the basis of all insulation. At the same time, down feathers "breathe," providing ventilation and taking away body moisture. The result is maximum warmth, minimum weight, and the finest insulation known to man or bird, for that matter. And you get all that, at the Bay's special low price. So don't be a silly goose. Order your down jacket today.

Being some items selected from a man's per-

Item: Summer dies a sudden death when you live within sight and sound of a resort. These autumn days are beautiful, yet there's a kind of gentle melancholy that goes with them, the awareness that yet another season in the sun has not merely gone, but gone dramatically and all but overnight.

One minute, it seemed, the bay was full of boats. The beach was full of bathers. There was the sound of outboard motors, laughter along the shore. But the moment that Labor Day had come and gone it was all just a memory. Suddenly the bay, the beach were deserted. The stillness seemed/to flow in. Down the way we could see the Staceys bringing in their colored rowboats, preparing to tow away their rafts for the long winter's sleep.

In the city there always seems a kind of segue between the seasons, one leading slowly into the other. Here it was all over in a day, an evacuation as complete as if it had been a bomb scare, everybody suddenly gone back to the purposeful and necessary duties of life after their carefree days.

The last gasp, so to speak, was when a religious group turned up for a picnic at the resort. From our porch we could hear their solemn hymns, a pleasant, oddly plaintive, but autumnal sound so different from the cacophony of the summer, contestly in hearing the their solemn. perfectly in keeping with the end of the season.

Item: An interesting note from Bette Morrison, a volunteer worker with the Canadian Mental Health Association group in Palm Springs, California, called Experience Inc.

Seems that some 400 retired men and women have found full or part-time employment, often at the specialties of their working lives. With some it has been a need to combat boredom or "feel useful", but others, as hereabouts, have needed the work to supplement their old age pensions.

Some examples: A former clerk, aged 70, has found work as a hotel desk receptionist, an ex-liquor store operator, aged 70, has brought his 50 years of expertise to a similar establishment, a 57-year-old ex-secretary, has become a valued worker at a local blind association.

I've no doubt that the idea — "an answer to the wasted years," as the founder puts it — would work here, though, as I've said before, I believe the most successful "senior citizens" are those who find a whole new way of life after retirements.

Item: To reading tonight Pierre Berton's new book "Hollywood's Canada" and recalling how, when I first heard the idea, I assured him that it would never work.

It being my view then that Canadians so lacked a sense of nationality that they couldn't really care that Hollywood has twisted and distorted the truth all these years. Now I hear from the publishers, McLelland and Stewart, that a sale of at least 50,000 (at $12.50 a copy!) is expected. Which may be why I don't write books.

Among his many gifts the one that shines through all Berton's work is his sincere belief that Canadians need to take themselves seriously and object when anyone — in this case the film capital's producers — treats us shabily. Apart from being a most readable book, the pleasant thing about Berton's new one is the fact that a whole lot of Canadians apparently feel the same way.

* * * Item: Some wild and wonderful background information on the British pubs from Mr. and Mrs. Jim Cleland, of our town, whose trips to the Old Country have involved a study of those ancient, hospitable inns. Things I don't know about the

Many of the oldest date back to the mid-thirteenth century. including The Chequers at Tonbridge, said to date from 1264. A good many of the inns of this vintage were built hard by the sites of the gallows for public executions, a sure thing for financial success.

The highest pub in the British Isles is called the Tann Hill, built on an isolated moorland road between Reeth, Yorkshine and Brough, Westmoreland. It's 1,732 feet above sea level, three-and-a-half miles from the nearest telephone and five miles from the nearest village.

The smallest inn in Britain is undoubtedly the Smiths Arms at Godmanstone, Dorset. It measures only 20 feet by 10 feet. The eaves of its thatched roof are just four feet from the ground. It was once the village smithy, but legend has it that Charles II stopped there and gave the blacksmith a licence to sell howe

It will cite as precedent a court ruling which overthrew the rejection of a similar application—for a sex shop — in Prince George.

As darkness takes over, a thousand hidden lights combine with the moon and stars, the hills, trees and shrubs, lakes, lily ponds and fountains, to create a fairyland softly scented by the flowers. 'Unusual' Indescribable! This alone is worth coming to see.

BUTCHART GARDENS FLORAL RESTAURANT — Open every day 11 a.m. to 7:30 p.m., serving delicious lunches, afternoon teas, and delightful buffet suppers in the evening. Continuous Snack and Coffee Bar Service.

BUTCHART GARDENS. KNOWN THROUGHOUT THE WORLD FOR THEIR INCREDIBLE BEAUTY ... EVER CHANGING, ALWAYS LOVELY! — Skillful planning, constant replanting, dedicated gardeners pooling their ideas and knowledge, keep them that way week after week, season after season. Developed from an old abandoned limestone quarry over half a century ago, they have grown to become one of the world's most unusual, written-about, talked-about, admired attractions.

Butchart Gardens Sparkling Entertainment MONDAY-FRIDAY INCLUSIVE: "The Butchart Gardeners' 1:30-3:30 and 5:45-7:45 p.m. Also colour film at dusk.

SATURDAY-SUNDAY: "The Butchart Gardeners" 1-3 p.m. and 5:45-7:45 p.m. Also colour film at dusk.

On mtny occasions, if the best result is to be attained, one must resist the urge to create a trick for himself at the first opportunity that presents itself. In experience, the expert has learned to con-trol this urge; the non-expert has not, if South's play of to-day's deal can be considered "typical non-expert" play. Neither side vulnerable.

king, East played back his remaining spade. South's Q-6 was now entrapped by West's A10-8. When play had ended, declarer had gone down one, losing four spades and a club. Had an experienced player been sitting in the South seat, he would have recognized that the danger to his contract was that East might be the possessor of the club king. If such were the setup, then all efforts had to be directed towards preventing East from returning a spade when he obtained the lead with his (presumed) king of clubs. Of course if West had the club king, then declarer had no today is the beginner with a greenhouse that has not been in use, or a sunporch in which it is desired to grow a few plants. The first question is, where can we get a few plants for a start?

The logical place, and the rience will teach you the kind of plants that can be grown together under the same conditions of heat, light, and ven-

Our particular consideration

place most often overlooked, is your own garden, and you can start with annuals that are now in flower. No plant draws more comment in a greenhouse or sunporch than a well grown trailing lobelia-with growth two feet long and covered with flowers. You can take one now from the corner of the window box, put in into a four or five inch pot for flowers all winter.

Petunias are another good plant you can dig up and put into pots, also the red salvias, the blue ageratum, dwarf snaps, and such other annuals as you may have. Most of our annuals are perennials in conditions a little more conge-nial and they will continue to grow and flower, and when a little straggly they can be pinched back and started-

Good Greenhouse? Experiment

To be a successful green-house or sunporch gardener you must be an experimenter, one who figures out things and makes a try, and is not defeated by lack of success now and then. Even if your first attempt at moving plants first attempt at moving plants from the garden into pots is not successful, reason out the cause of failure and you will have learned something of Perennal flowering plants of low growth can also be used in the greenhouse. Low growing chrysanthenums, house with plenty of ventila-tion. Use clay pots, wooden boxes or tubs, or the brown-colored fibre garden pots. Water the plants well a day ly, water again after potting and stand in the shade ou and stand in the snade out-doors for a day or two. When they have recovered from the shock of moving, take them indoors, but be sure to give them plenty of air.

Other perennials that can be potted now include Lychnis viscaria, Doronicum, primulas, and any that flower-early in spring. These will often give color in a cool greenhouse soon after Christmas.
All the so-called "small bulbs", which include the many varieties of crocus, the Puschkinja. Chionodoza, can many varieties of crocus, the Puschkinia, Chionodoza, can be grwn in pots in a cold greenhouse, that is one without any artificial heat. These fall and winter flowering bulbs prefer cold weather, and a little too much warmth may prevent flowers, or cause the bloom to collapse within a cuttings of zona; perargoniums (florist's geranium) can be rooted now, and old plants put into large pots, cut back a little to make large flowering plants in just enough heat to prevent frost.

plant that is different.

The prime consideration will be for the conditions of heat, light, ventilation, and benches or ground beds, needed for the plants that are your main interest. As a specialist you will obtain the information you need from books devoted exclusively to your fa-voted exclusively to your fa-voriet plants, and these you will find in the public li-braries. Read these books before you start so as to save expensive alterations later. Most beginners prefer to collect any plants that will grow in the conditions at

RAPE DEFINED

A rapist defined and described is included in a program to be given girls attending Highrock and Shoreline high schools next week by Const. Don Alexander of the Colwood RCMP de-

Alexander has been giving the course to high school students and womens groups in his area for the past year and this year is including students in grade 9.

The two-hour course includes local cases and, with students, cases dealing with hitchhiking.

"We do skits on what happens in a car and how the girls can deal with the situation," says Alexander. There will be a film called Lady Beware and some instruction on self defence.

"We try and get the girls talking and want them to break in and ask questions anytime during the talk," added Alex-

He got the idea for the course from Saanich Constable Gary Bosence who does almost the same thing in his area.

The talk will again be given high schools in the Colwood-Langford area this year.

Bishop Cridge Centre's dis tribution shop opened to the public Wednesday.

Previously it was only for residents at the Hayward Heights housing complex and mothers at the Bishop Cridge day-care centre.

The distribution shop started last June when a Gold River shoe store proprietor donated 150 pairs of a new shoes, boots and slippers, shop co-ordinator Terry Brown said.

"I spoke to several of the mothers at Hayward Heights and they decided to organize a shoe and clothing distribution shop for the needy at Bishop Cridge," Brown said. All clothing was received through donations.

But it's not a regular kind of store. At the distribution shop, 27 Hayward Heights, none of the merchandise is priced, but customers pay what they can afford.

tt's been such a success, said Brown, he decided to expand operations by inviting anyone in need to participate.

The shop is open every Wednesday from 4 to 8 p.m.

$45,000 NOT ENOUGH

welders on an oil rig to settle for a pay offer of $45,000 a year highlights a major debate over wages that might be a watershed in Australia's losing battle against inflation.

The welders, now on strike, are holding out for $62 a week more than the company ofter and improved conditions. Their workmates on the rigs — unskilled men who make beds and do other housekeeping — are content with their $32,000-a-year jobs. But they — and the rig — are out of work until the welders end their walkout.

"These figures are higher than any I could possibly have arrived at in any arbitration," an arbitration commission judge complained angrily this week in refusing to let the J. Ray McDermott Co. make the welders a better offer.

The welders, whose work is year-round, have been receiving $498.75 a week, while the unskilled already have settled on a new wage of $615.38.

The relation between union wage demands and the economic future now has become a critical question throughout Australia, where wages are rising steadily and the annual inflation rate is around 17 per cent.

Times News Services OTTAWA — High and rising jobless rates accompanied by continued rapid price increases, are forecast by the Conference Board in Canada in its latest quarterly review of the economy.

The private economic research group says unemployment will average about 7.3 per cent of the work force this year and the rate will rise to 7.8 per cent in 1976.

Summer Ends in a Day When the Resort Closes

Being some items selected from a man's personal diary:

sight and sound of a resort. These autumn days are beautiful, yet there's a kind of gentle melancholy that goes with them, the awareness that yet another season in the sun has not merely gone, but gone dramatically and all but overnight.

One minute, it seemed, the bay was full of boats. The beach was full of bathers. There was the sound of outboard motors, laughter along the shore. But the moment that Labor Day had come and gone it was all just a memory. Suddenly the bay, the beach were deserted. The stillness seemed to flow in. Down the way we could see the Staceys bringing in their colored rowboats, preparing to tow away their rafts for the long winter's sleep.

In the city there always seems a kind of segue between the easyn there always seems a kind of segue between the seasons, one leading slowly into the other. Here it was all over in a day, an evacuation as complete as if it had been a bomb scare, everybody suddenly gone back to the purposeful and necessary duties of life after their carefree days.

The last gasp, so to speak, was when a religious group turned up for a picaic at the resort. From our porch we could hear their solemn hymns, a pleasant, oddly plaintive, but autumnal sound so different from the cacophony of the summer, perfectly in keeping with the end of the season

Item: An interesting note from Bette Morrison, a volun-teer worker with the Canadian Mental Health Association, group in Palm Springs, California, called Experience Inc.

Seems that some 400 retired men and women have found full or part-time amployment, often at the specialties of their working lives. With some it has been a need to combat boredom or "feel useful", but others, as hereabouts, have needed the work to supplement their old age pensions.

Some examples: Aformer clerk, aged 70, has found work as a hotel desk receptionist, an ex-liquor store operator, aged 70, has brought his 50 years of expertise to a similar establishment, a 57-years old expected that has been a valued.

tablishment, a 57-year-old ex-secretary, has become a valued worker at a local blind association.

I've no doubt that the idea — "an answer to the wasted years," as the founder puts it — would work here, though, as I've said before, I believe the most successful "senior citizens" are those who find a whole new way of life after retir-

Item: To reading tonight Pierre Berton's new book "Hollywood's Canada" and recalling how, when I first heard the idea, I assured him that it would never work.

It being my view then that Canadians so lacked a sense of nationality that they couldn't really care-that Hollywood has twisted and distroted the truth all these years. Now I hear from the publishers, McLelland and Stewart, that a sale of at least 50,000 (at $12.50 a copy!) is expected. Which may be why I don't write books.

Among his many gifts the one that shines through all Berton's work is his sincere belief that Canadians need to take themselves seriously and object when anyone — in this case the film capital's producers — treats us shabbily. Apart from being a most readable book, the pleasant thing about Berton's new one is the fact that a whole lot of Canadians apparently feel the same way.

Item: Some wild and wonderful background information on the British pubs from Mr. and Mrs. Jlm Cleland, of our town, whose trips to the Old Country have involved a study of those ancient, hospitable inns. Things I don't know about the

Many of the oldest date back to the mid-thirteenth century, including The Chequers at Tonbridge, said to date from 1264. A good many of the inns of this vintage were built hard by the sites of the gallows for public executions, a sure thing for financial success.

The highest pub in the British Isles is called the Tann Hill, built on an isolated moorland road between Reeth, Yorkshire and Brough, Westmoreland, It's 1,732 feet above sea level, three-and-a-half miles from the nearest telephone and five miles from the nearest village.

and five miles from the nearest village.

The smallest inn in Britain is undoubtedly the Smiths Arms at Godmanstone, Dorset. It measures only 20 feet by 10 feet. The eaves of its thatched roof are just four feet from the ground. It was once the village smithy, but legend has it that Charles II stopped there and gave the blacksmith a licence to sell heave.

Some of the pubs show a sense of humor by the early proprietors. The Quiet Woman has a sign showing a woman without a head. A sign showing a black boy being scrubbed is u'll find the Live and Let ive Inn, the Nobody Inn, the Who'd Have Thought It and the

No More Buck-Passing on Floods

There'll be no more bureaucratic runaround for residents of the Hillside area whose homes were flooded last May 23 due to a faulty main pressure value.

The residents concerned have been trying ever since to

WASHINGTON (UPI) General Motors unveiled its new Chevrolet Chevette this week, calling its 40 mile per gallon import fighter "a turn-ing point for our industry."

AVERAGES

The European design car is the smallest ever built by a major Detroit auto maker and is more than five feet shorter than Chevy's full sized Impala. The base model will carry a $3,098 price tag in the U.S., just $3 more than the subcompact Vega, with a stripped model — the Scooter — tagged at $2,899.

Robert D. Lund, who a year ago was selling 20-foot Cadil-lacs, said the Chevette was "a turning point for our industry in this decade" and he predicted first year sales of as many as 275,000 units. He said the car should demonstrate that the U.S. industry can build small cars.

According to Environmental Protection Agency test results, the minicar is capable of 40 m.p.g. on the highway and 28 m.p.g. in a city-subur-ban driving test with its stanfour security and an armonic and four september of the large 97-cubic-linch engine, the car was rated at 39 m.p.g. and 30 m.p.g. re-
